Van Driver Course

Anyone who would like to drive the school vans but has not taken the defensive driving course should contact James. This includes parents and teachers. You may email him at: james@adminservice.com

Free to Anyone

The fourth grade is offering our excess building materials for free to a good home if you can pick them up by the end of this week: cedar shingles (new), sand, stone (under blue tarp), partial bag of mortar brick scraps. Please contact Annie Porter or Tom Bell if you are interested. All will be removed next weekend.

Free Boots

An anonymous former River Valley parent dropped off three practically new pairs of rubber galoshes for anyone who can use them. One pair is size 5 and two are size 6. Stop in the office if you are interested.

Box Tops for Education

We collect Box Tops for Education to benefit our school. You will find "Box Tops" on many of the products you use. Each box top is worth at least ten cents. Participating companies include: General Mills, Cascadian Farms, Pillsbury, Yoplait, Betty Crocker, Huggies, Cottonelle, Kotex, Pepend, Ziploc, Hefty, Kleenex, Scott, Viva, Saran and more. Look for specially marked boxes and drop-off the box tops in the basket in the lobby. If you don't use these products, perhaps a relative or friend does. Thank you for your support.

Thank You

Thank you, Elena Valta, for taking on the daunting task of ordering our books and materials for Act 195 through the PA Department of Education website. Your perseverance is most appreciated.

Thank you to Nerice Kendter for stopping by the office with willing hands and a few minutes to spare!

Thank you, Rebecca DiCandia, for generously taking on Current duties again this year. We are grateful for your help.

Thank you to all of the 8th grade parents and Ed George for all of the great work you did around the school weeding and clearing out the brush. The grounds look so much better!

From the Faculty

WHAT ARE THE CHILDREN LEARNING?

First Grade: Math

Second Grade: Language Arts

Third Grade: Farming

Fourth Grade: Language Arts/Norse Mythology

Fifth Grade: Ancient Civilizations

Sixth Grade: Physics

Seventh Grade: Middle Ages

Eighth Grade: History

From the Leadership Council

As promised last week, these are the LC goals for the coming year. We thought everyone would like to see them as an example of where we are headed.

- 1.) Commit to greater transparency between the LC and the broader community by posting in the Current, topics of discussion and creating LC open hours for the community at the LC meeting on Friday afternoons from 3:30 to 4:00 pm.
- 2.) Give more thought to the way announcements are being made so that the community feels that they have time to digest the information and give input. It is our desire to work on supporting everyone to feel that they are a valued member of the community.
- 3.) Improve our regular reporting to Faculty. An on-going question will be, when do we move forward on the recommendations of other bodies of the school and when do we bring it into a larger discussion with the faculty.
- 4.) Clarify with the Board and the Faculty our process of collaborative decision making so that the community holds a greater understanding of how the LC and the TDC function.
- 5.) Identify HR consultant as resource for potential personnel issues .
- 6.) Find creative ways to engage with Parent Council.
- 7.) Complete our 2014-15 self-eval by May 15th.

Cambridge Baby

What's afoot this Autumn?

Clothe Kindergarten children in natural wool for their well-being - wool's ability to regulate the body's temperature means children are equally comfortable listening to a story or running around in the woods. We believe boiled wool slippers are the very best for children. Boiled wool is sturdy yet flexible, allowing the foot to expand and contract in comfort. Boiled wool is naturally breathable, anti-bacterial and dirt-resistant too! We also have Merino wool vests, leggings and coats, wool socks wool tights, and wool hats to keep children warm on wonderful chilly days.

Go to: www.cambridgebaby.co.uk/catalog/ for more information and to place an order.

Yoga Loka

Retreat Weekend with Bonnie at Mount Eden in Washington NJ

October 10 -12. Full weekend and daytime rates are discounted until 9/10.

If you have ever asked yourself "how can I achieve higher consciousness?" the answer can be found in the chapter of the Yoga Sutras called Sadhana Pada. This second of four chapters in The Yoga Sutras by Patanjali has many suggestions for the student pursuing liberation. During this retreat we will investigate these suggestions, the yamas and niyamas, the Ashtanga 8-fold path, and including the use of asana, pranayama, and kumbaka.

We will explore effort and steadfastness through asana, self-inquiry through meditation and discussion, and surrender through chanting and ritual practice. These elements are paramount, according to Patanjali as well as ancient and contemporary followers of yoga. How we can direct these practices in the most beneficial way is a worthy inquiry that will inevitably lead to higher consciousness.

For more information and to register see our website at www.Yoga-Loka.com

About Soft Star

Soft Star Shoes has been handcrafted by our family business for 29 years. Our soft, durable classroom shoes stay on securely while providing comfort, protection and "barefoot-like" mobility. Children can design their own colors and motifs, too! If you have any questions, please give us a ring—we'd love to hear from you!

On the Road Again!

The Bowers family continues our school orbit. In case you're following or story, on each step of our ongoing journey we've been very fortunate to find some wonderful living spaces to rent and caretake and, perhaps most rewarding, some beautiful heart-full people and sustaining friendships. Tara Bowers and Alice Bowers (First grade) are currently looking for a rental or/and home caretaking opportunity as close to RVWS as possible. We would love to hear if you know of any! Thank you for sharing our story.

Cello Lessons at OTAC

While Daniel Hawkins is ensconced in an academic Masters program in St. John's, New Foundland, he has secured the cello program by collaborating with another amazing cellist.

Daniel will continue his vision of OTAC through continued virtual interaction of the lessons, jams, events, dances, workshops and personal appearances!

Mirjam Ingolfsson... was hailed as "a young poet of the cello". Born in Reykjavik, Iceland to a family of musicians and artists. Mirjam Ingolfsson started the cello at the age of four and began touring Europe and the United States at age seven. She is an artist with her own distinct musical voice who has established herself as an important performer and pedagogue in the Philadelphia region. As a dedicated teacher, Mirjam Ingolfsson co-founded The Leopold Mozart Academy in 2001, where she teaches cello, Music Theory and Solfeggio. Her Masters degree in Music includes graduate work at the Cleveland Institute of Music and Temple University. She is a winner of top prizes in numerous competitions such as the ASTA Pennsylvania State Competition and the Graham Stahl Cello Competition. She has participated in the Piatigorsky Seminar in Los Angeles and festivals such as the Bach Festival of Philadelphia, the Schleswig Holstein Festival in Germany and the Jeunesse Musicales Festival in Switzerland. Steve Jobs Was a Low-Tech Parent

By NICK BILTON SEPT. 10, 2014

(Ms. Niemczura did some research and found out that the conversation with Steve Jobs mentioned in this article took place when his children were 12 and 15 years old.)

When Steve Jobs was running Apple, he was known to call journalists to either pat them on the back for a recent article or, more often than not, explain how they got it wrong. I was on the receiving end of a few of those calls. But nothing shocked me more than something Mr. Jobs said to me in late 2010 after he had finished chewing me out for something I had written about an iPad shortcoming.

"So, your kids must love the iPad?" I asked Mr. Jobs, trying to change the subject. The company's first tablet was just hitting the shelves. "They haven't used it," he told me. "We limit how much technology our kids use at home."

I'm sure I responded with a gasp and dumbfounded silence. I had imagined the Jobs's household was like a nerd's paradise: that the walls were giant touch screens, the dining table was made from tiles of iPads and that iPods were handed out to guests like chocolates on a pillow.

Nope, Mr. Jobs told me, not even close.

Since then, I've met a number of technology chief executives and venture capitalists who say similar things: they strictly limit their children's screen time, often banning all gadgets on school nights, and allocating ascetic time limits on weekends.

I was perplexed by this parenting style. After all, most parents seem to take the opposite approach, letting their children bathe in the glow of tablets, smartphones and computers, day and night.

Yet these tech C.E.O.'s seem to know something that the rest of us don't.

Chris Anderson, the former editor of Wired and now chief executive of 3D Robotics, a drone maker, has instituted time limits and parental controls on every device in his home. "My kids accuse me and my wife of being fascists and overly concerned about tech, and they say that none of their friends have the same rules," he said of his five children, 6 to 17. "That's because we have seen the dangers of technology firsthand. I've seen it in myself, I don't want to see that happen to my kids."

The dangers he is referring to include exposure to harmful content like pornography, bullying from other kids, and perhaps worse of all, becoming addicted to their devices, just like their parents.

Alex Constantinople, the chief executive of the OutCast Agency, a tech-focused communications and marketing firm, said her youngest son, who is 5, is never allowed to use gadgets during the week, and her older children, 10 to 13, are allowed only 30 minutes a day on school nights.

Evan Williams, a founder of Blogger, Twitter and Medium, and his wife, Sara Williams, said that in lieu of iPads, their two young boys have hundreds of books (yes, physical ones) that they can pick up and read anytime.

So how do tech moms and dads determine the proper boundary for their children? In general, it is set by age.

Children under 10 seem to be most susceptible to becoming addicted, so these parents draw the line at not allowing any gadgets during the week. On weekends, there are limits of 30 minutes to two hours on iPad and smartphone use. And 10- to 14-year-olds are allowed to use computers on school nights, but only for homework.

- “We have a strict no screen time during the week rule for our kids,” said Lesley Gold, founder and chief executive of the SutherlandGold Group, a tech media relations and analytics company. “But you have to make allowances as they get older and need a computer for school.”
- Some parents also forbid teenagers from using social networks, except for services like Snapchat, which deletes messages after they have been sent. This way they don’t have to worry about saying something online that will haunt them later in life, one executive told me.
- Although some non-tech parents I know give smartphones to children as young as 8, many who work in tech wait until their child is 14. While these teenagers can make calls and text, they are not given a data plan until 16. But there is one rule that is universal among the tech parents I polled.
 - “This is rule No. 1: There are no screens in the bedroom. Period. Ever,” Mr. Anderson said.
- While some tech parents assign limits based on time, others are much stricter about what their children are allowed to do with screens.
 - Ali Partovi, a founder of iLike and adviser to Facebook, Dropbox and Zappos, said there should be a strong distinction between time spent “consuming,” like watching YouTube or playing video games, and time spent “creating” on screens.
- “Just as I wouldn’t dream of limiting how much time a kid can spend with her paintbrushes, or playing her piano, or writing, I think it’s absurd to limit her time spent creating computer art, editing video, or computer programming,” he said.
- Others said that outright bans could backfire and create a digital monster.
 - Dick Costolo, chief executive of Twitter, told me he and his wife approved of unlimited gadget use as long as their two teenage children were in the living room. They believe that too many time limits could have adverse effects on their children.
- “When I was at the University of Michigan, there was this guy who lived in the dorm next to me and he had cases and cases of Coca-Cola and other sodas in his room,” Mr. Costolo said. “I later found out that it was because his parents had never let him have soda when he was growing up. If you don’t let your kids have some exposure to this stuff, what problems does it cause later?”
- I never asked Mr. Jobs what his children did instead of using the gadgets he built, so I reached out to Walter Isaacson, the author of “Steve Jobs,” who spent a lot of time at their home.
 - “Every evening Steve made a point of having dinner at the big long table in their kitchen, discussing books and history and a variety of things,” he said. “No one ever pulled out an iPad or computer. The kids did not seem addicted at all to devices.”
